THE BANKRUPTCY BIG HOUSE

The Bankruptcy Big House

With all of the investigations and trials coming up in the news, I thought it would be timely to present my infographic "The Bankruptcy Big House."

My intent in creating this infographic was not to glorify or glamorize society's criminal element, but to bring into focus how easy it can be for people to make wrong turns and big mistakes in their lives, and how that can result in the need to seek shelter in bankruptcy court.

Benedict Arnold, Bernie Madoff and Charles Ponzie were only some of the characters who found themselves in tremendous debt and on the wrong side of the law.

Video Of The Month

Your meeting of creditors, while it can be a very stressful experience doesn't have to be. Typically you're testifying under oath about the accuracy of the schedules, and other bankruptcy papers you have filed, and about your income and your expenses, and your assets and your debts. The whole process in a typical Chapter 7 case takes about 10 or 15 minutes. It is in public. There will be people in the gallery.

You need to make sure you have your photo ID and your original Social Security card with you at that meeting, because if you don't, the trustee may not conduct the meeting.

Even though it's called the meeting of creditors, I call it the meeting with the trustee because, although creditors are given notice of the date time and place of the meeting they almost never show up unless they're usually somebody who you know. So that is not typically an experience you're going to have at your meeting with the trustee.

What Our Clients Are Saying...

Gloria had these very kind words to say about our team:

"Hello Mr. Drescher

I am writing this letter to you to thank you and your staff for the care I have received during a very difficult time in my life. For me it is worth every penny.

I must make specific reference to Ms. Keesha White your Legal Assistant. She has been a blessing of calm and thoroughness from my first encounter with her. I don't believe things happen by chance; at least in my life.

I believe in acknowledging good when it is afforded you. Maybe it will continue to be a part of your existence. Thank you again. God bless the work you do.

Sincerely
Gloria"
